

The wind whispered secrets through the jagged cliffs as Elena tightened her grip on the weathered map. The ink was smudged, but the promise of adventure lingered in every line. Somewhere beyond the horizon lay the treasure her father had spent his life searching for. A low rumble echoed in the distance, and she glanced nervously at the darkening sky. Time was running out, but she refused to turn back now.